

California Voluntary Carbon Market Disclosures Act (VCMDA) Disclosure

Hormel Foods Corporation (Hormel) is providing the following response to California's VCMDA (also known as AB 1305)¹:

The information presented in this disclosure is provided to be responsive to the requirements of the VCMDA. The following information reflects Hormel's good faith effort to provide information complying with such requirements. In light of the general lack of applicable guidance, Hormel intends to monitor developments to assess the impact of any new and/or amended protocol, methodology, guidance, legislation, regulation, enforcement memorandum, and applicable law in connection with the VCMDA and reserves the right to modify the information included in this disclosure.

The information provided herein pertains directly to, and only to, current claims and statements set forth in Hormel's climate-related data and disclosures most recently published by Hormel and available on its website. Although Hormel first established emissions reductions goals in 2012 for achievement by 2020, information for earlier periods is no longer posted on the website and not provided as new goals have been established and Hormel believes historical data (i.e., earlier than 2021) is neither required nor meaningful to an understanding of Hormel's current emissions reductions goals and achievements.
